INDUSTRIAL SCHOOL FARMING LAND

2000 Acres Selected for Reform
School Reserve at Fort Grant
Under Act of Congress

INSTITUTION WILL BE MADE SELF-SUPPORTING

Two thousand acres of excellent farming land, on the Fort Grant military reserve, have been selected by Mulford Winsor, chairman of the land commission, for the state. The selection was made under the act of congress granting the state 2000 acres of the reserve for the industrial school. According to Winsor, the industrial school can be made self-supporting by careful cultivation of the land which has just been selected. Eight hundred acres are sub-irrigated. That is, the water is near the surface, and practically no irrigation is required. This land grows excellent crops of grain and corn.

Water can easily be developed for the remainder of the school's 2000 acres, and also for much land off the reserve, according to Winsor. This can be done by pumping and by storage. Foot, Gandy and Big creeks flow across the reservation, and along them are numerous small reservoir sites. Cloudy and Big creeks usually flow only in wet weather, but Foot creek is practically a perpetual stream. The last season was one of the driest in history but Foot creek carried a good stream of water past the fort at all times. There is now much snow in the surrounding hills, assuring plenty of water during 1914.

No farming is being done by the industrial school pupils at this time. Everyone at the fort is too busy straightening things around to do much else. The sewer and water systems have to be completely overhauled and many buildings are being repaired. Next spring, however, agricultural operations will begin. An extensive orchard will be planted and as much as possible of the sub-irrigated land will be utilized.

McNeal Farm Exhibit Sent to El Paso for Exhibition There

The farm exhibit from the McNeal fair, which was held Tuesday is not lost, neither has it strayed or been stolen. It is in a place where, without a cent being expended by the farmers, it will do thousands of dollars worth of good for the Sulphur Springs valley, in the way of an advertisement.

It has become customary, following the closing of the valley exhibition each year, to place the exhibits in a special car sent by the El Paso & Southwestern management, and to then transport them to El Paso. They are placed in a special farm exhibit room in the El Paso & Southwestern building, where they are seen by thousands of visitors. Those who saw the exhibits can well believe the statement that on the most vigorous Missionary can be "shown" with ease by the big fruit, vegetable and grain displays.

Reckless drivers on the Roosevelt highway are being scored by Gila county officials and plans were made for the prosecution of all automobilists who fail to recognize the dangers of the sharp turns at various points on the road.

A new viola, a tenor violin, which he had purchased less than a week before from the Fisher Music store of Tucson, was the means by which Geo. Ames, a vagrant arrested in Douglas obtained his freedom in that city Wednesday morning. When confronted with the charge by Judge Roark of the Smelter City, Ames seized his instrument and produced such ravishing music that the judge and court were hypnotized by the strains and the judge immediately liberated his prisoner.

Describing the "official pen souvenir" for the Panama-Pacific International exposition at San Francisco in 1915, a communication was received by Gov. Hunt from the fair commission. The letter states that the souvenir will show the seal or the state building of each state and that it will appear on spoons, fobs and other devices. The matter will be turned over to the Arizona commission for the fair in the event that an appropriation is made for an Arizona building for the exhibition.

An El Paso dispatch says:—An entirely new revolution in Mexico with Emilio Vasquez Gomez as its chief and which involves General Felix Diaz, and others who have been prominent in Mexican politics and who have at one time or another been allied with either or both federal and constitutionalists in the process of organizing in El Paso.

A regularly formed junta with many of Emilio Vasquez Gomez' followers and several ex-Huertistas, Orozco revolutionists, and former constitutionalists has been meeting here regularly and have planned to begin the newest Mexican revolt in the state of Chihuahua where, immediate success is expected because of the conflict for supremacy now being waged between federal and constitutionalist forces.

Boy Who Caused Reform School Trouble Escapes Again

Robert Gray, the Douglas boy whose disclosures of cruelty practiced at the state reform school at Benson, of which he was an inmate, recently caused such a house-cleaning at that institution, has again escaped from the school, according to a message received yesterday by the police from W. G. Whipple, the new superintendent, who thinks that he may have returned to Douglas and is probably working as one of the smelters.

Young Gray, who is a husky youth of about 17, was formerly a bellboy at the Gadsden, and was sent to the reform school from Douglas. Last summer he escaped and upon his return to Douglas exhibited great wit on his back, which he said were caused by beatings received at the school. His story, to which he made affidavit, received wide publicity and resulted in a personal investigation of the reform school by Governor Hunt, who dismissed Superintendent Harper, and caused some radical changes in the conduct of the school.

Coal Rates Into Effect January 15 is Latest Report

Advice has just been received by the Arizona Corporation Commission that the new coal rates from Gallup, New Mexico, to Arizona point will not be effective until January 15, 1915. Recently, the Commission was advised that these rates would be effective January 1st, but the Interstate Commerce Commission has modified its former order and extended for fifteen days the date upon which the new rates will be effective. Coal dealers in various parts of the State who have withheld their orders, should take notice that they will not be able to take advantage of the new rates as soon as was at first supposed. The reduction in rates resulted from an appeal made by the Arizona Corporation Commission to the Interstate Commerce Commission. The reductions in most instances are material.

To those who wish to take advantage of our combination subscription offer, it would be well to do so now as the offer only stands until the end of December. Better do it now—today.
